Profile

What the directories say

Claire is ranked as a defamation and privacy junior in both Chambers & Partners and The Legal 500. She is also ranked for data protection in The Legal 500. She accepts instructions on behalf of claimants and defendants.

"Claire has developed into a fine advocate who is very supportive and pragmatic." - Chambers and Partners 2023

"She rolls up her sleeves and provides very practical advice and possesses excellent judgement, being able to read the court and her opponents well. Her written work is concise and very compelling and she has a gentle authority on her feet." - Legal 500 2023

"She has a really good grasp of the law and very clear advocacy in court." - Chambers and Partners 2022

"An exceptional legal mind with the ability to provide clear and decisive advice. An expert in her field with the ability to chart a way through difficult issues and dilemmas." - Legal 500 2022

Overview

Claire has represented clients in the County Court, the High Court, and the Supreme Court. She has also acted in ECtHR and international media cases. Recent clients include: a Premiership football club, several award-winning investigative journalists and journalistic organisations, and a FTSE 100 company.

Claire has particular experience of acting for media organisations challenging reporting restrictions. She has appeared in the family courts and the Court of Protection (most recently acting for the BBC and Sky News in a successful application to lift reporting restrictions: see PH and another v Brighton and Hove City Council and others [2021] EWCOP 63 and news reports here). In addition, she has significant experience of providing pre-publication legal and Ofcom advice to publishing houses and a range of national print and broadcast media organisations. She has advised The Sun, The Times and The Sunday Times, the BBC and Channel 5.

Claire is also developing a practice in employment law. She has experience of claims in unfair and wrongful dismissal and discrimination, as well as preliminary hearings including applications to amend. Her media and information law practice makes her well-placed to act in employment cases with a data protection or confidentiality element, as well as matters raising open justice and privacy issues in the Employment Tribunal.

In 2018, Claire was awarded a Pegasus Scholarship to participate in the Paris Bar Exchange. She spent one month attending a variety of court and arbitration hearings, and sat with the media and information team at leading French law firm, Herald. She is a contributor to Arlidge, Eady & Smith on Contempt, 5th edition, first supplement.
